Restoration of blood supply to the traumatized tissues is the key aspect of the treatment. Stent-assisted coiling has proved to be an effective option. However, its broader application remains challenging because of associated vascular, infectious and ischemic complications. Other treatments such as application of external fixators and clinical salvage have been proven. This study compares short- and long-term outcomes in patients treated with elastic stents or metallic stents (single stent, multiple stents and temporary stenting). The outcome of 272 consecutive patients with pelvic fracture treated with either metal stents or elastic stents between February 2005 and November 2015 was retrospectively reviewed. Clinical follow-up was possible in 239 patients. Thirty-day mortality was 23.8% in the stent group and 26.4% in the conventional coiling group. No statistically significant difference in mortality was found. External fixators were applied in 22.3% of the patients due to recurrent occlusion of the stents and in 8.3% due to infection. In the elastic stent group, six elastic stent fractures occurred after implantation. Four of them were spontaneously dislocated and two required additional transileal placement of additional elastic stents. In the metallic stent group, 40 delayed displacements of stents occurred after stenting. The rate of minor vascular complications was high and occurred in seven patients (3.8%) in the group of stent placement 0cc13bf012

The propagation of a second-harmonic wave in a two-component plasma is investigated. A generalization of Thomas-Fermi model is proposed that takes into account the impurities' contribution as well as the temperature. The dispersion relation for the second-harmonic wave is obtained. When the nonlinearity and the temperature are low, only an electrostatic wave propagates in the plasma and a limiting velocity is found. These results are in agreement with the predictions of the standard theory for a homogeneous plasma.IMG_6433.JPG A hopeful voter waits in line to cast their ballot at Newark Public Library polling place in Newark, Ohio. (Pamela Rios/The Star-Ledger) A Newark, Ohio, polling place broke the law in 2016, incorrectly allowing undocumented immigrants to cast their ballot, and the election board hasn't tried to make it up to voters since, according to a new report. In February, The Associated Press reported that illegal immigrants were allowed to vote in a number of U.S. elections in 2016. This is the first time a state election board has been found to have done so, and it's apparently the only one that failed to fix the problem after being told about it by the national media. CNN has more: "In 2006, an illegal immigrant cast a ballot in Virginia. The same thing happened in North Carolina and possibly in Nevada, though neither state would say so publicly. In Texas, which allowed illegal immigrants to vote until 2005, one may have voted twice, though that could not be confirmed. In that case, he or she must be denied a spot on the voter rolls for future elections. "In a joint investigation by the New York Times and ProPublica, election boards in eight states found that tens of thousands of people, mostly illegal immigrants, had cast ballots that year." The Newark election board acknowledged its mistake in a letter addressed to the Ohio secretary of state, dated Telomerase-positive breast tumors are of high proliferative potential and are a prognostically unfavorable subgroup of breast cancers. Cyclin E is a cofactor for activation of telomerase and its overexpression is indicative of high-grade malignancy. To determine the diagnostic value of telomerase immunohistochemistry (T-IHC) and its correlation with that of cyclin E, the authors examined formalin-fixed paraffin-embedded breast tumors (n = 158) for the presence of telomerase activity by the telomeric repeat amplification protocol (TRAP) assay and cyclin E expression by immunohistochemistry and tested for a correlation with tumor grade, axillary lymph node metastasis, and disease outcome. Telomerase activity was detected in 103 of 158 tumors (65%), with a high incidence in grade 2 (19/20) and grade 3 (68/83) tumors ($\chi^2 = 31.69$, p
