Why are .net enterprise clients more expensive than local clients? Why is it that the hosting and software licensing for .NET/Office clients are more expensive than local clients? For example, in practice, I do not see a difference between a product being 5 or 10x more expensive, if the product does not support non-local clients. If it is that non-local clients are more expensive than local clients, what could be done to avoid this? A: You do not need to pay for the hosting. You do not need to pay for the application licenses. Instead you pay for a service that will make sure that your application can only run as you want. The difference is in the maintenance. If you have a local client you need to watch it to make sure that it doesn't crash. If you have a .NET client you need to make sure that it is not affected by a security update. If you have a non-local client you might want to have it sent to you to avoid having to install your own copies of libraries. All of the points in these bullet points require the company that sells you the application to be willing to provide you with the resources to get it running the way that you want it to run. This means paying for people to do the work.

Diagnosis and management of periprosthetic joint infection: a 15-year single-centre experience. Periprosthetic joint infection (PJI) is a major complication of total joint arthroplasty. The optimal management is still controversial. The aim of this study was to assess the diagnosis and management of PJI over the last decade in a single centre. The clinical and radiographic records of patients diagnosed with PJI at our institution from 2000 to 2015 were retrospectively reviewed. In the initial period (2000-2004), PJI was diagnosed in 38 patients (50 per cent female,  $48 \pm 13.8$  years). Four cases (8 per cent) were classified as superficial infections, and 34 (76 per cent) as deep infections. 6d1f23a050
